

Move over Ewan and Charlie – in August, our MD, Ian Rutherford completed a 4,500 round trip to the Sahara and back on his Pan European motorbike!

Travelling with one other friend and no back-up Ian said that the trip was gruelling, suitably dangerous and downright hot!

The Sahara was reached after crossing the three; lower, middle and high Atlas Mountain ranges. Temperatures in the desert topped 50 degrees and a hotel owner when asked why there were no other guests, commented that 'no-one ever comes to the Sahara in August!'

Fighting off a severe case of food poisoning meant the tackling the Tizi n Tichka mountain pass back out of the Sahara after not having eaten for four days.

Ian commented that he enjoyed every minute of the challenging trip – even the bike crash in Marrakech and two days lost after a break down in Spain all added to the challenge!!

Well done Ian!
